What is “Grant Assistance for Grass-Roots Human Security Projects (GGP)” ?

Concept of GGP

➤ To realise an inclusive social and economic development, development assistance for human security should be provided not only through national governments but also through community-based organisations that are working at the grassroots level.

Features of GGP

➤ GGP is a scheme (initiated by the Japanese government) to financially assist community-based organizations in developing countries in response to various development needs in a prompt and request-based manner with a comparatively small scale grant.

- ❑ Meeting basic human needs for local communities through participatory needs assessment
- ❑ Respecting local ownership under joint monitoring by a local implementing partner and the Embassy
- ❑ Ensuring the self-sustainability of the project by handing over operating responsibility to the local community.

Total Amount Spent on Projects in Nigeria (Thousand of USD) (1998-2016)

The Embassy of Japan’s current focus for GGP assistance in Nigeria has been those sectors such as Health, Agriculture, Vocational Training, and Infrastructure.

“The local ownership and sustainability of each GGP is of paramount importance. This leads to meeting basic human needs at the community levels and eventually creates the potential for the social and economic growth of the country. Japan will continue to partner with the Nigerian Civil Society and ultimately contribute to creating a brighter future.” Mr. Sadanobu Kusaoke — Ambassador of Japan to Nigeria

Japan is committed to promoting African development through Tokyo International Conference on African Development (TICAD) process with the principle of African ownership and international partnership.
